MEETING OF TAMMANY HALL.

THE ADMINISTRATION DENOUNCED.

Mayor Wood Held Responsible for the Disbanding of the Old Police.

Hon. John Cochrane's Address.

Three Free Fights in Old Tammany Fashion.

The Democrats of the City assembled in mass-meeting last night at Tammany Hall, in obedience to the following call:

[illegible] Resolutions, Repeal! Repeal!! Repeal!!! [illegible] meeting of the Democracy, [illegible] Mayor of the City and County of New-York, friendly to regular nominations [illegible] are requested to assemble [illegible] Tuesday evening, August 13, [illegible] purpose of considering the very [illegible] Legislature of the Mad [illegible] of our citizens.

[illegible] Democracy assembled, Shelters's Hall could hardly contain them the balcony, and [illegible] Golden Light denied the eyes of the cheerers.

The proceedings of the evening commenced with the reading of a Chairman Mr. William M. [illegible] with their office. He briefly [illegible] the enthusiasm, with which the room [illegible] the heat of the weather making the [illegible] warmth and magnitude, to denounce the municipal [illegible] passed by the last Legislature, the tyrannical Al[illegible] they would emphatically show to [illegible] State, that they utterly disapproved of and renounced those acts, and were determined not to be [illegible] until repealed. [Loud cheers.]

The list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries was then read. The Vice-Presidents comprised two gentlemen from each Ward.

A [illegible] and fourteen long resolutions were then read by Julian B. Phillips. In these resolutions the policy of President Buchanan was enthusiastically endorsed; the decision of Judge Taney in the Dred Scott case commended, the attempts of the "Black Republicans" to impose a government upon the City, and the Metropolitan Police act were emphatically denounced. Also, the Fire Warden law, the Excise law, and the claim of Gov. King to appoint a Street Commissioner on the ground that it was a "State office." Other resolutions were highly complimentary to the Democratic party, as pre-eminently a "law and order" party, and that only by their adhering to the faith of Jefferson and Jackson would the Union be cleansed from the taint of fanaticism.

After the reading of the resolutions loud calls were made for James T. Brady. Three tumultuous cheers were given for Fernando Wood. Brady was again called for. The Chairman said that he had been unexpectedly called out of town in the afternoon, and therefore could not attend. Then equally loud cries were made for Sickles. The Chairman said he had letters to read from gentlemen who could not attend, but so deafening were the cries for Sickles, that the letters could not then be read, and Mr. Sickles, in order to quiet the meeting, had to present himself. He was greeted with a thunder of cheers, after which, and before he could commence his address, cries were uttered of "Buchanan." These were drowned in fresh thunders for Sickles. When silence was at length restored, Mr. Sickles proceeded:

MR. SICKLES' ADDRESS AND ITS INTERRUPTIONS.

It is impossible, he said, to witness this great assemblage, gathered together on this eventful occasion in the midst of the vast triumph which was achieved by the party at the last general election. It has remembered rightly, this was the first occasion since that victory that any great meeting of the Democracy, for any vital cause, had been held in that building. And, in view of that circumstance, might we not take the opportunity to call, with all justice and all truth, upon our fellow-Democrats, our friends of the [illegible] not only in this State but over the [illegible] North and South, to bear witness, that the commerce, mechanics, manufactures of the country were never in a more glorious condition than they are under the present glorious Administration. [Loud cheers.] Are we not in enjoyment of more prosperity and peace at home, and is not our nation more honored and prosperous abroad (cheers); then would have been the case if the policy of the fanatical party.—[The rest of the sentence was lost in the noise that ensued, which was compounded of ironical cheers and very genuine groans.] Imagine, continued the speaker—imagine, if you can, what would have been the effect, if the Abolition Banned party, bearing the name of John C. Fremont on its banner had succeeded at the late Presidential Election. Instead of national relations with all nations, and unexampled prosperity at home and abroad, we should have internal strife and external discord. Danger would have surrounded us on every side. We would have been on the edge of traps and pitfalls. But thanks to the Democracy,—that evil was spared us. But although remembered in the great national contest, owing to circumstances that ruled the hour we were unsuccessful in the State of New-York.

Here a man in the crowd interrupted Mr. Sickles with words to the effect: "And won't be successful while we have such traitors among us as you are." Immediately a thousand cries of "Turn him out" arose, and a general rush was made for him. He appeared to have many backers, for a free fight ensued,—a regular Tammany fight that in her old conservative days she could not have surpassed. Around and among the room went the combatants, amid yelling and hooting that drowned every syllable which Mr. Sickles, the Chairman and 20 or 30 of the Vice-Presidents endeavored to make audible. They went again around and around the room in a mass that from the platform was truly magnificent. "Let him alone" reiterated Mr. Sickles. "Turn him out," yelled the crowd. "Gentlemen, it's too hot to argue, and I am sure it's too hot to fight," resumed Mr. Sickles. "Turn him out," responded the crowd, and at length out he went, whether with whole or broken bones could not be known. Mr. Sickles resumed:

If this party had obtained the control of affairs in Washington they would have shown the same rock-ribbed character—

Here another fight broke out, caused by some intemperate allusion on the part of a friend of the individual who had just been put out, and whom the crowd determined should not be put out himself. Mr. Sickles gesticulated, but whether he uttered a word can only be matter of conjecture, for not a sound was audible. The combatants took the whole room for their arena, and circled about and about, many blows being struck, but, apparently, no very serious injuries received. At length, comparative quiet was again restored, when Mr. Sickles once more commenced:

That party, if successful at Washington would have exhibited the same disregard of the rights of the people at large, as they did at Albany, where circumstances have given them a temporary triumph.

A third fight now began, and quite a fugitive exhibition was made by several persons in defence of Mr. Sickles, and in denunciation of any body who attacked his motives and character, that for some minutes it seemed likely that the meeting would prematurely come to an end. However quiet was once more restored, and Mr. Sickles began again.

In respect of national politics he would say that an American, whether abroad or at home, could not but feel that we have never had such a strong, efficient and able administration of affairs at Washington, as that which had been exhibited to the country since the inauguration of James Buchanan. We were not, he stated, going to pull that Administration, or even to throw discredit upon it, by lending countenance for one moment to the reasonable acts of the Albany oligarchy.

Mr. Sickles proceeded to speak of Kansas, and said that on that one subject all the vexed questions in the late Presidential contest had been grouped together. What had Mr. Buchanan done? He had sent to that distracted Territory as profound a statesman as we had ever known. [Loud cheers for Hon. J. Walker.] And we could now look confidently forward to a fair and peaceful solution of the many difficult questions that had grown out of the Kansas imbroglio. It was a matchless act of the President to send to Kansas the ablest one of Webster, to cut off the hydra-headed monster that had so long disturbed us, and thus to leave the country in peace and repose. But how could the City of Kansas, without thinking of the Democratic party, elect? It was the Black Republicans who had made that question in Kansas, and who had made it a sectional question. The Democrats had no sectional feelings to gratify. But who [illegible] these same Black Republicans got into power, what did they do? Their recent conduct at Albany was a monument of inconsistency. Buffalo, Rochester, New-York, Brooklyn, lay like prey before them, and they remodeled the Charters of those cities. They took from the Mayors and from the corporate authorities the power that they had ever exercised, and claimed to legislate for those cities themselves. They had altered the time when the Charter elections should take place, pretending that municipal officers should not be chosen in the heat of party strife, but really intending to set aside all former modes of election, and to inaugurate a new order of things after their own heart.

In conclusion, he asked the attention of the audience while he referred briefly to charges which he understood had been made against his course, as a Democratic member of the late Legislature. He had been charged with having aided in the perfection and passage of the Metropolitan Police bill, and of having in consequence of private injuries and private griefs, forgotten, for the moment, his allegiance to the Democratic Party. Such charges were unfounded in the facts, and he challenged any living man to point to one word or one act of his, that even in the shadow of a degree, went to substantiate such a charge. Concerning the Police bill, he would say that successful efforts had been made to have it so drawn that in any case—whether constitutional or not—the Police force existing before its passage, should continue in office. That course had been recommended by the officers of the Department, and such a result was anticipated by the Democratic members of the Legislature. The law allowed the existing force to continue in office during good behavior, and it was anticipated that some one of the force would test its constitutionality, while the others gave it tacit obedience. But unfortunately, as the result has proved, that course had not been pursued. Those who undertook the management of the police interest in the City, deemed resistance before a decision as to the constitutionality of the bill had been had, the most politic, and the result was that a large number of good men had been thrown out of employment. With reference to the other charge, he said his course had been consistent. Proceeding further, he reviewed the conduct of the Republican and American members of the Legislature; saying that it seemed to him that their action during the whole of the session indicated a belief that the days of their power were few. They appeared very much like a man who is about to be hanged, who knowing he will never have another chance at a good dinner, devours all he possibly can of what is before him.

At this point Mr. Michael Murray appeared in front of the platform and inquired whether it was true that he (Mr. Sickles) sat perfectly silent while the Police Bill was under consideration.

Mr. Sickles replied, that he had explained that matter, and regretted the absence of Mr. Murray, as he was sure the explanation would have been satisfactory.

Mr. Murray was satisfied, but soon desired to inquire in relation to that Peter Cooper affair.

Mr. Sickles was about to reply, when the larger Thomas Burns ejected him from the room.

While on his way to the door, Mr. Murray turned to the Speaker and said he was overcome by physical force.

Mr. Sickles thought not. He believed he was overcome by a superabundance of good nature. He then closed his remarks with an expression of his belief that the next election would result in the entire overthrow of their enemies. Three cheers announced his retirement, and three more the appearance of Hon. John Cochrane, who spoke nearly as follows:

This is not the first meeting that has ever been called for the denunciation of the systematized oppression of legal freedom, and of the attempted subjugation of municipal privileges, by the fell demon of party spirit. The history of the world is crowded with similar instances. From earliest time, these rights have both recognized and wrongs chronicled, the same recurring spectacle of privilege invaded by power, and of popular protest against the usurpation, has been witnessed. By the age whose example admonishes, and whose experience guides us, we are taught that the possession of power without patriotism to direct it, is the certain precursor of its perversion to injurious purposes, whether by the avowed tyrant or his affiny in the guise of a political party. The swords which in the capitol dripped with Cesar's blood; which, at Runnemede, were held at Cesar's throat; the religious indignation, which at Wittemberg armed the tongue of Luther against Papal despotism; and treasures which forced from the feudal lord the freedom of the cities of mediæval Europe, are familiar chronicles of their attempts in vindication of oppression, of religious liberty in combination against despotism, and of municipal rights in vindication of its indefeasible title. And as history shows in years will other scenes of similar struggle be enacted. Always, while the world stands, will proceed the interminable contest between the liberal and the absolute principle—between the effort to individualize power, and the effort to popularize it. And they who sympathise with the contest, and would partake of it, must engage for a sleepless vigil and a ceaseless war. The sentry on the tower will ever report approaches made against the citadel, and the liberties of the people will be maintained, as they ever have been, at the expense of unremitting labor, exposure and alarm. [Applause.] The events which have called upon us to man the walls of Tammany tonight are akin to those which have always announced an attack upon constituted rights. The decent garb of laws has been used as the pretext of flagitious outrage. The device of conservative legislation has been employed for the subversion of privilege. So far from the general good having been consulted, a passionate desire for revenge upon political opponents seems to have suggested measures which, if suffered, would doubtless gratify the vindictive political malignity, and secure to their authors the utmost political power. [Applause.] In the month of April last a Republican Legislature, after a period of bitter incubation, succeeded in producing a series of enactments, violating all law and all justice. Their aim was the denuding of the population of New-York City of the means of governing themselves, and of reducing them, in their corporate capacity, to State servitude. The method proposed was the overthrow of the fundamental law of municipal franchises and of personal liberty. Accordingly, the representatives of other districts than those embraced within our corporate bounds were invoked to the legislative experiment. Several acts were reported and passed, comprising essential parts of the scheme of City subjugation. Of these, one, for "to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof," was the most oppressive and detrimental. Hardly had it received the Executive approval before men's minds were stung to madness. The consecrated fabric of constitutional liberty had been ruthlessly assailed, and fundamental and chartered rights lay slaughtered by a political party which proposed its own aggrandizement at the expense of its Democratic opponent. An organized police, matured by experience, of approved discipline, and in whose custody property and personal rights were secure, was ordered to be dispersed, and its superior officers to be discarded. A new body, the creation of a foreign authority, and virtually amenable to it, offered to patrol our streets and to supervise our dominies. In a word, a blow was struck at municipal liberty by the Republican Party at Albany, which had not been dared since the British were forced from Boston, and evacuated New-York. This consisted of the withdrawal from the Mayor, Corporation and Commonalty of New-York of the right of local self-government; of the merger of the City topography in a Metropolitan Police District of the State, composed of the counties of Kings, Richmond and New-York; and of the transfer from the municipal to the State authorities, of the appointment of local magistrates. The Constitution was cited against this revolutionary measure. Fundamental principles, which compose the constitutional fabric, were appealed to. Both citation and appeal were unavailing. Not even delay was vouchsafed for an opportunity of receiving the decision of the supreme judicial tribunal of the State upon a question, at the least, admitting of great doubt, and with an indecent haste, those to whom was committed the execution of this execrable law applied themselves to the work. From that time to the present, the usual consequences of arbitrary procedure have been of daily occurrence in our City. The attempt to replace a veteran police corps with an untried, undisciplined force would, in itself, have deranged, by retaxing, the public peace. If to this be added the demoralization usually attendant on a successful attack upon vested rights, the general recklessness were to be thereby generated, and the license which ordinarily inspires the profligate on every occasion of public excitement, I may be excused an expression of surprise that a vestige of order survives. [Applause.] As it is, however, riots have abounded and affrays have been of frequent occurrence. Insubordination has naturally flowed from official inefficiency, and seditious practices spread through large masses of people; local offices suddenly becoming vacant, have had State incumbents thrust upon them, in violation of the plainest statutory provisions; and the act has been justified by the same arbitrary assumptions which claimed constitutionality for the Metropolitan Police law. But it is claimed that this law having been pronounced constitutional by the high Court of Appeals, it should be submitted to. Undoubtedly the law should be recognized to the extent required by the exigencies of a law-abiding community—that is, obligatory as a present rule of social conduct, and no more. We must reject as unfounded all claims that the motives of its authors are justified by the decision, and we must refuse to the decision itself any other confidence or respect than can be predicated on the obedience we tender to it. [Great applause.] Neither the principle nor the logic of the opinion of the Court can in my humble judgment, be sustained; and were it not that it stands recorded, the law is constitutional—that the Court holds—the better evidence of its unconstitutionality would be needed than the insufficiency of the reasons adduced to uphold it. [Applause.] There can be no possible benefit, direct or remote, to be subserved by a strict obedience of the Court. The argument which legitimately appertains to the subject, is not of large compass. It is comprehended, in fact, within the mere statement of the question. That the territory of New-York County can be neither limited, enlarged, nor merged by the enactment of a statutory district, composed of two additional counties, admits of no dispute. That the same supervisory direction, and the same mechanical applications, are requisite to a police organization for the City, whether controlled by Metropolitan or Municipal authority, is equally clear. The offensive law is in full operation, and still New-York City and County has the same local identity it heretofore has had, and the Metropolitan Police exercises the same local functions which appertained to their predecessors, the Municipal Police. [Great applause.] The effort, therefore, to absorb geographical, civil and political New-York in a wanton civil, political and geographical district, begotten of New-York, Kings and Richmond Counties, was but a weak and impotent device. The locality of New-York City remains, and would remain, though such a district were extended to Lake Erie; and the Government of the City is still, in each and all its parts, necessarily local, and ever will be local, though the power which administers it be within the Dail of Albany. [Great applause.] But, though New-York City may not have been swallowed up in Richmond and Kings Counties, yet it is confidently asserted that the offices of Metropolitan Police Commissioners having been created by law, after the adoption of the State Constitution, these officers were properly appointed by the State Executive, under the provisions of the second section of the tenth article of that instrument. The language of the section refutes the assertion. The section reads thus:

All county officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, shall be elected by the electors of the respective counties, or appointed by the Boards of Supervisors or other county authorities, as the Legislature may direct. All city officers, and officers of villages or incorporated villages, whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns and villages, or of some division thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof as the Legislature shall designate for that purpose. All other officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all other officers whose offices may be created by law, shall be elected by the people, or appointed as the Legislature may direct.

The assumed power of the executive to appoint is derived from the last sentence of the section, wherein it is declared that "all officers whose offices shall be hereafter created by law shall be elected by the people, or appointed as the Legislature may direct." Now it is very certain that both classes of officers separately contemplated in each of the two foregoing sentences, are not provided for by the constitution, are to be either elected by the people of the counties, cities, towns or villages, or to be appointed by the local authorities thereof, as the Legislature shall direct. When, therefore, a third class of officers is referred to, in the sentence immediately succeeding, coupled with directions for their creation, contained in the language, "shall be elected by the people, or appointed as the Legislature may direct," the rules of composition and grammatical construction instruct us that the the word "people" is here referred to the people of the cities, counties, towns and villages, and the word "appointed" to the authorities thereof, as both words had just previously been limited and applied in the context. If the word "appointed" is not to be thus referred, it can have but one other application, viz.: that which supplying to it the words "by the people," furnishes you with the constitutional direction which then stands, "shall be elected by the people or appointed by the people, as the Legislature may direct." [Applause.] It follows, therefore, that the very letter of the constitution has suffered violence by a Gubernatorial appointment of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners. Were anything, however, wanting to substantiate these appointments, as an usurpation of the rights of the people of the City of New-York, I would invoke the address of the Convention when proposing the constitution for the ratification of the people of the State, they, in their last words say, "If the Constitution now proposed be adopted, the happiness and progress of the people of this State, will, under God, be in their own hands"—not in the hands of a Governor at Albany. [Great applause and cheering.] If the Constitutional letter has suffered, it may be thought superfluous, perhaps, to inquire about the injuries done to its spirit. But, in my estimation, it is precisely in this in which consists the enormity of the outrage. Constitutions may be violated—their sanctions can be reaffirmed; laws may be disregarded—their dignity may be vindicated. But what redress is there for the ruthless overthrow of a body of rights, the slow growth of ages, the accumulated wisdom of generations, and the basis of all that gives power to laws or support to Constitutions? None whatever, save that to be found in rallying from the direction of affairs those who have trifled with their official obligations and triumphed over the vital principles of municipal freedom. [Applause.] Before revolutions, before constitutions, before liberties were, the charters of municipal privilege existed. They embodied the earliest concessions of unfettered rule, to the popular principle. They were strung by the vassal from the necessities of the paramount tyrant. Amid the convulsions of mideval Europe, the shocks of principalities, and the disorders of feudal anarchy, here and there emerged these fortresses of civil liberty. The requisitions of the Crusades imparted the first considerable impetus to commerce as a potential agent of civilization and freedom. The Italian cities were the first to feel the beneficial effects. Venice, Verona, and Genoa were [illegible] country, which, with accumulated property, sought, in laws, the means of protecting it. Thus, the power of wealth triumphed over the sword, forcing from the tenacious grasp of feudalism the liberty of the vassal, and replacing the servitude of the people with municipal immunities. The cities of Lombardy followed in train, and composed a powerful association of free communities, the fruits of their industry. Many German cities about the same time created a municipal form of government, and which continues even to the present day. Lubeck, Cologne, Brunswick and Dantzic, united in that celebrated association, called the Hanseatic League; which having been joined by eighty other cities of different States, extended through Europe a commercial republic. These were the first steps of liberty planted in municipal freedom. Personal liberty was the necessary incident. To secure these, local jurisdiction was asserted and maintained—civil liberty and political power were the inevitable consequences. [Applause.] So we see the principle of mercantile association extending its protection over human freedom at its infancy. Its continuance depended on the development of the municipal element, the true expansion of which ultimately engrafted upon the civic fabric the spirit of local self-government. Thus the liberty to which the man of the middle ages was first awakened, was that which was to be found in the charters alone of local communities. These formed the steps of the infant giant and they prepared the path of his further progress. The united Netherlands succeeded to the inheritance thus laboriously prepared. The fruits of their industry were secured to them by their local powers; while their enterprise coveted and enjoyed municipal freedom. Upon this basis was erected that vast superstructure of the liberties of the United Provinces, which has repelled the waters in which it was founded and defied the despotisms by which it was surrounded. The very vitality of freedom is the right of local self-government. If this is attacked or impaired personal rights proportionably suffer; and the liberty of the race will come to be despaired of when the chartered rights of an incorporate City can be invaded with impunity. When England was struggling against the encroachments of absolutism, one of the principal clauses of the Great Charter ordained that "London, and all cities and burghs, shall preserve their ancient liberties, immunities and free customs." [Applause.] And since then every succeeding attempt of the paramount power at dominion has been primarily aimed at the suppression of the local privileges of municipal corporations. The force that longest withstood the invasion of these privileges were the train bands of London; and that all England to-day is not the heritage of despotism, is because of their successful resistance to attempts upon the sacred right of local self-government. [Cheers.] The memorable contest for constitutional liberty, in the seventeenth century, was precipitated by the attack of the Stuarts on the charters of the free cities of England. Abject servility impressed the courtly throng that crowded the ante-chamber of Charles the Second. The blight of corruption pervaded all the offices of a Government, the administration of which had fallen into the hands of favorites and courtezans. Judges and juries hastened to the performance of the will of the tyrant; fortunes were swept away and estates were sequestered to supply a needy exchequer. Indeed, it seemed that the national subjection was complete when Russell and Sydney were beheaded. But the citizens of London still retained their spirit of independence; they refused to be directed by tinkering in the election of their local magistrates. The obstacle was serious; but that it should no longer oppose the royal efforts for absolute sway, a quo warranto was issued against the corporation of London; and an obsequious Court of King's Bench pronounced, for frivolous reasons, that the franchises of the city were forfeited to the crown. Crushed by this dreadful blow, the Aldermen and Common Council supplicated the king for a return of their charter. The tyrant's purpose having been attained, the charter was accordingly restored, but with the reservation to the throne of the appointment of the City magistrates. City after city was thus successively attacked, and their charters seized were subsequently returned upon similar conditions. Thus were the liberties of the people crushed by the suppression of their right of self government. Every corporate city and every borough in the kingdom, if the popular party was found to surrender its privileges; and new charters were granted, which secured everywhere to the court a Tory ascendancy. History announces that to had been done, in James's time, two centuries later, among a people whose blood is the inoculation of monarchy, and whose distinction is free institutions, has she despotism of the tyrant Stuarts been renewed. [Cheering.] The right of the citizens of New-York to elect their own magistrates has been torn away from them; not indeed, by the minions of a King for the purpose of subjecting a people to tory rule, but by a Republican Legislature, for the purpose of subjugating a free city to worse than tory rule—to the rule of a party whose machinations against civil liberty the veriest despot dare not resort to at this advanced period of the world. [Cheers.] It cannot be necessary to trace upon this continent the same growth of constitutional liberty which we have remarked upon European soil. The events which declare the various stages of its progress compose our fireside histories; yet would it be well to revert to the fact that the patriotism which germinated into our Revolution sprang from that root of local rights planted deeply in the municipal constitutions of the large colonial cities. Boston, New-York, Philadelphia and other cities were secured in the right of enacting their own laws, and chosing their own magistrates by their charters. These were very properly considered the guaranty of colonial liberty and the muniments of its title. [Cheers.] When they were attacked, resistance was resolved, and hence the facts submitted to "a candid world" by the Declaration of Independence, in justification of the act which absolved the colonies from all allegiance to Great Britain, are these charged against George III, viz: "He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harrass our people and eat out their substance. He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws: giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation * * * For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the powers of our government." Among the causes, therefore, which justified the resistance of the colonies to Great Britain in 1776 are to be found the very causes which justify resistance to the usurpations of the Republican Legislature of New-York in 1857. Were there no hope that the popular strength would rescue freedom at the ballot-boxes—no reason to believe that a temporary submission will be compensated by continuing order and ultimate relief, it were far better that revolution should come than this tyranny should be longer endured. [Immense cheering.] What charter next shall be seized—what Democratic city shall next fall before the rapacity of a Republican Legislature, is with the people to decide. They have witnessed a more serious assault upon constitutional freedom than any since the time of Charles II.; they have beheld the judgment of a high judicial tribunal in its support, and have heard the triumphant note of a partizan press. Can the temper of the country endure this calmly? Can its patriotism contemplate all this undismayed? Wherever a mind thought upon the hideous crime—upon the obvious and execrable motive of its authors—upon all its dreadful consequences, if unopposed to national liberty, the cry of resistance was heard; and resistance is still the cry. [Cheers.] Not that the decision of the Court shall be defied, but that the law shall be annulled and its very record expunged. Not that we will resist here the judgment which upholds the law, but that we will reverse, at the ballot-boxes, both the judgment and the law. [Loud cheering.] We will send representatives to the coming Legislature charged with the duty of repealing this infamous statute, and of obliterating from the State archives the last trace of its existence. [Tremendous cheering.]

Citizens of New-York, your dearest rights have been invaded. The corporate immunities of the proudest City of the Western hemisphere are endangered; and the inhabitants of the most patriotic City in the world are oppressed. No Democratic heart is there that does not respond to the call upon its affections; no Democratic arm that is not prepared for emancipation. Let the struggles of faction, then, cease for the occasion, and in a common union of the whole Democratic Party, let the calumnies of panders and the detraction of malice pass unheeded. I, myself, (you will pardon the allusion,) have been the mark of the malicious misrepresentations of maundering and anonymous scribblers for the press. Consign all such to the doom of their native insignificance. Nor be misled by the personal cries which are declaimed to divide you. He who would descend to personal aggrandisement in a struggle for the freedom of millions, would adhere to his selfish purposes, though that freedom should perish. Let no such man be trusted. Your chartered liberties have been taken away. Your magistracy has been changed. Your power of self-government has been restrained. Republican functionaries have been imposed on you, and Democratic functionaries have been displaced; and though superior in numbers, in intelligence, and in wealth, to your opponents, it is sought to exclude you from the dignities of office. Mortifying as this must be to those accustomed to self-government, they have no time now for vain regrets. The coming elections are to decide whether the marauders on the people's rights shall be cheered on in their career, or whether they shall be arrested by the stern rebuke of the popular voice. In these elections, you, fellow-democrats, will have an important part. Let us hope that your action will redeem your favored City from disgrace, and guard the country from its threatened danger. [Applause.]

Mr. Cochrane's speech was listened to with marked attention. There was no material disturbance while he was on the floor, and when he had concluded the meeting adjourned, the noisy Democrats having departed some time before.

Interesting from Mexico.

RESULT OF THE ELECTION—PEACE IN YUCATAN.

In the Prensa of Havana, we find dates from Mexico to the 26th of July.

The revolutionists in the neighborhood of Lake Chalapa, who were intended for service in Lower California, rebelled against the military leaders of that country. Considerable skirmishing had resulted, and the mutineers were still at large on the 6th.

The revolutionist Miguel Correza Bravo, who was captured by the troops of General Alvarez was shot in Chilpancingo.

The elections had all gone in favor of Comonfort, and the result was rejoiced at greatly, salutes of 21 guns being fired at all the principal cities and towns. Scandalous rumors had been circulated against Comonfort, and among other accusations it was said that he intended to sell the Isthmus of Tehuantepec to the Americans.

It is thought that some additional light will soon be thrown upon the Sonora filibustering expedition. All Crabb's correspondence had fallen into the hands of the Mexicans, and is soon to be published.

The Diligence was robbed on the 14th in broad daylight, in the centre of the city of Puebla, and no arrests were made.

The papers speak with much satisfaction of the peaceful manner in which the elections in Yucatan had all been effected. The oration pronounced by the Chief of the Executive and the reply of the President of the Legislature, the Prensa says, warrant the conclusion that the officials who are now in power are men who have had enough of theories, and who expect to promote the public happiness by material reforms, turning the people to a love of labor, and the preservation of the peace and tranquillity which that outraged country stands so much in need of. The war of castes which has devoured Yucatan, will at last consume her, if all her inhabitants do not hasten to assist in the realization of the principles which these documents unfold. The address of the President says:

It is not impossible that mistakes, the excitement of the passions, or other accidental causes may surround the Government with embarassments and difficulties. * * * * If any faction should attempt to disturb the public order, the Government will not succumb, until it shall have done the utmost in defence of law and order. The situation of the country demands instant attention, and the Government will attend to it. Experience indicates the necessity of certain administrative reforms; the Government will immediately undertake them. Tranquility and public peace are indispensable for social advancement; the Government will watch over such precious objects.

Obituary.

Walter Cochrane, Esq., father of Hon. John Cochrane, died yesterday morning at his residence, No. 133 East Twelfth-street, at the advanced age of 86 years. Mr. Cochrane was born in this State, and resided in New-York City nearly all his life. He was educated as a lawyer, but being possessed of ample means, never practiced his profession. He was of Irish descent. The body will be taken to Albany this afternoon, where it will be interred in the family vault.

Extraordinary Escape.—The St. Jones (Canada) News says: "A freight train of cars, arriving from Montreal on Monday evening last, was propelled violently against some stationary cars, at one end of which stood a nurse of Mr. Walmsley, mail conductor, who had charge of an infant child, belonging to that gentleman. The child was in a small hand-carriage, and the nurse was leaning against a post set in the ground which the cars struck and dislodged. The girl was flung to some distance, and the child caught by its clothing and carried for several yards by the wheels of the car; but both escaped with scarcely any injury but the extreme fright and shock."

Justice Sewright, of Monticello, Sullivan Co., has imposed a fine of $100 on a man named Schanck, for violation of the Excise Law, by selling both as a grocer and tavern keeper.

Description of the Recent Battles Between the British and the Chinese.

The Canada's mails reached this City from Boston at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. We publish below extended details of the important and highly interesting news, of which a telegraphic summary has been received.

When within 60 miles of Boston the Canada, on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, passed the Europa, outward bound. The steamships saluted each other with rockets in splendid style.

The two steam frigates, Niagara and Agamemnon, with their portions of the cable on board, arrived at Queenstown on Wednesday. It was expected that the steamers engaged in the expedition would proceed to Valentia on Thursday, that the shore rope will be landed on Monday, and the work of uniting the cable commence on Tuesday next. The operations, it is understood, will not be on the Island of Valentia, but in a small bay in the neighborhood, on the main land, where the bottom is smooth, free from sunken rocks, and protected from the Atlantic storms. A house is being constructed at the terminus, into which will be introduced the end of the cable, and during the process of laying no person will have admission there except the Secretary of the company and his assistants, and they also will avoid all communication with persons who may be attracted there by curiosity. The machinery on board the Niagara has been satisfactorily tested. It appears that the telegraph between Valentia and Killarney, about 40 miles, is in progress, but will not be completed for about a fortnight; so that, for the present, all intelligence respecting the progress of this mighty work will be sent by mail ever once a day to Killarney, and thence, by way of Dublin and Belfast, to all parts of Europe [illegible]

The London Post says: [illegible] and belief that Russia has for the three last years been endeavoring—and successfully endeavoring—to sow discontent in India, becomes more and more prevalent among the best informed persons in Europe.

A telegraph from Paris of July 31 states that Lafragua, the Envoy of the Mexican Republic to the Court of Spain, had arrived in Paris, where the conference for the settlement of the dispute between Spain and Mexico are immediately to take place, under the mediation of the French and English Governments.

Our London correspondent, writing on the 31st ult., says:

The interest taken in the United States in the destination of the monster steamship Great Eastern, renders of some consequence everything connected with her. In a couple of months, in all probability, she will be afloat, as she is progressing very rapidly towards completion. Mr. E. Hope, Chairman of the Great Eastern Steam Navigation Company, the owners of the leviathan; Mr. T. J. E. Campbell, M. P., Mr. E. Betts and Mr. P. W. Miles, Directors; Mr. Yates, Secretary; Capt. Harrison, and Sir Curtis P. Rooney, Secretary to the General Trunk Company of Canada, are going down to Liverpool on Thursday next, and thence will proceed to Holyhead, to make arrangements respecting the first voyage of the Great Eastern to Portland.

We have received from our special correspondent on board the Niagara, a detailed account of the progress of the Atlantic telegraph enterprise, up to the 1st inst. The letter will appear to-morrow.

THE GREAT RACE FOR THE GOODWOOD CUP.

Victory of the French Horse Monarque—Defeat of the American Horses, Fryer and Prioress—Full and Very Interesting Particulars.

From Bell's Life in London, Aug 2.

Whatever shortcomings elsewhere we may have had to chronicle during the present season, of which by-the-bye, the greater half has passed away,—Goodwood is still the "glorious Goodwood" it was even in what are termed its palmy days, when, as was correctly "observed" in our last, the "sky-blue and white" of the late Lord George Bentinck, and the "yellow and scarlet" of the Duke of Richmond were the popular colors unfurled in almost every race run for at the meeting. Occupying nearly two pages—12 columns—of the Calendar, the programme embraced engagements of every class and description—walter races alone excepted—amounting in the aggregate to thirty two items—a decided increase over last year—which distributed in the following proportion:—seven to Tuesday, seven to Wednesday, ten to Thursday, and eight to Friday. Of what material this magnificent bill of fare was composed will appear from our report of each day's proceedings, to introduce which with the discussion of surmises is quite unnecessary, considering the length to which this report is likely to extend before our week's labors are completed. It may not be out of place, however, to notice a suggestion or two which have been made to us by several owners of horses respecting the arrangement of the races, viz., to bring forward one of the large handicaps—the Steward's Cup for instance—to Tuesday, and to replace it on the Wednesday by one of the two large two year old races now appropriated to Thursday; by which alteration the interests of those owners having horses engaged in both the Findon and Bentinck Memorial Stakes would be materially augmented.

THE AMERICAN HORSES.

Of all the brilliant meetings that have been held in the Duke of Richmond's princely domain, we are unable to recall any anniversary upon which so much genuine interest has been manifested respecting the Cup race as the present, from the circumstance of Brother Jonathan entering the lists with the French (who may be considered annual competitors) to dispute the palm with our English "cracks." The entry, likewise, was the largest ever known for that prize, and embraced, with a few exceptions—Black Bonny, Sauntever, Shrewsbury, Drumor, Ignoramus, Black Tommy and Adamas—all the best horses in the country, so that, in every respect, the encounter may be termed a national one, and the triumph thereby rendered more memorably glorious. The chief interest, of course, attached to the debut of the American horses, whose "time," in their own country has been so remarkable as to suggest the idea of a difference in the "measured miles" of the New and the Old Worlds—with what reason will hereafter appear. In this country the time test has ever been regarded as a fallacy, whilst American sportsmen, on the other hand, swear by it, and in proof of their confidence in its accuracy, and of the superiority of their "trials" over the English, we may state that our sporting brethren in the United States backed their opinion by their dollars with the spirit that invariably distinguishes their speculating transactions. Since Mr. Ten Broeck's arrival in this country with his horses their appearance on the English turf has been anticipated with feverish anxiety by our Trans Atlantic brethren, and when it was known "for sure" that Goodwood would be the scene of their debut, large commissions were entrusted to ourselves and many Americans in England, to be invested on the "stripes and stars." An immense number of American sportsmen, likewise, took this opportunity of visiting the mother country to witness some member of "glorious Goodwood" which they have so often read of, and to watch at what has been aptly termed an "Exhibition of the horses of all nations."

THE FRENCH HORSE MONARQUE.

At the eleventh hour, another foreigner appeared upon the scene in Monarque, when, after canvassing over for the principal prize at Rotterdam, Doncaster, and Newmarket, he was forthwith shipped for Falmouth, and on Monday last, passed Gravesend, under the care of his trainer, his patron, who lots Chantilly on the Oaks, with the exception of backing Flavio and Fortuna, Mons. Lupin's horses had been located for nearly three weeks at Goodwood, under Richmond Commissioner's care, and on the Saturday previous to the meeting, we are informed, were exercised over the Cup course, when Flavio run up to his old form and beat Fortuna a long way.

THE DAY—ROYAL VISITORS.

Tuesday, July 28.—The Goodwood Cup is unquestionably the aristocratic fête day of the sport, and for many years past Windsor, Belgravia, Brighton, Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, have contributed the elite of their aristocracy and beauty to swell the attendance in the Grand Stand, and add to the kaleidoscopic coloring of the grounds and the emerald-green terrace, where, underneath the shade of the trees, the racing can be enjoyed by the choicest of the fashionables and confluence of the Sovereign, the Princes, the provincialisms of many of the Lords of the Turf who are invariably to be met with on the Goodwood course. Generally speaking, Goodwood is the Queen's Majesty, is favored with fine weather, and a more enjoyable day to persons of the rank and fashion that the world affords could not be desired. Throughout the morning the railway received at London Bridge, Brighton, and Portsmouth, we are informed, presented unfailing indications of a "Cup Day." Even the extra number of the betting class of visitors who availed themselves of the admirable arrangements made by the London, Brighton, and South Coast

This was a sharp engagement, and the British suffered heavily.

The Democracy met last evening in Tammany Hall, and listened to speeches from Hon. DANIEL E. SICKLES and Hon. JOHN COCHRANE, on what they termed the obnoxious laws passed by the late Legislature. While Mr. SICKLES was speaking some one charged him with having been a traitor to the Democratic Party. Whereupon several fights ensued, and the disturbers were ejected without ceremony. There were no bones broken, although several received severe bruises.

The Spiritualists went out to Winfield, L. I., to hold a Picnic. They had a very fair time as Picnickers—a very poor time as Spiritualists. Some speeches were attempted, but they were very dull, and the young folks drew off in a body for a dance. There was only one manifestation upon the ground during the whole day. One poor fellow got cramped by the spirit of an Indian who lived in those woods two hundred years before, but was relieved when he had given vent to a most unearthly and Indian-like series of yells.

Mrs. CUNNINGHAM was taken, literally carried, for she refused to assist at all in the movement, to the Tombs yesterday noon, very quietly, and without exciting any great suspicion in the street. AUGUSTA fainted as they removed her mother from her home. HELEN accompanied her mother, but was not permitted to remain in the Tombs after dark. Some strange stories are told, in another part of our paper, from authority which seems to be good, as to Mrs. CUNNINGHAM's promises to Dr. WOODWARD, in case he would swear to a false and slanderous statement concerning Dr. WOODWARD. By the arrival at this port, yesterday, of the Empire City we have intelligence from Havana to the 8th inst. The stoppage of some of the Banks recently established in Havana had created a panic, but prompt assistance from the Government had partially restored confidence. It was rumored that the Spanish ship-of-war Guadalquivir had captured a Slaver off the east end of Cuba.

The Young Men's Republican Committee hold their regular monthly meeting at Stuyvesant Institute last evening. The proceedings were very spicy. Two sets of delegates appeared for the Eighth Ward, and their differences were referred to a Committee of three, who were instructed to report at the next meeting. The following preamble and resolution, offered by Mr. SEYMOUR, of the [illegible] and the matter was finally referred to a Committee of three to report:

Whereas, Simeon DRAPER, by resigning his position as one of the Commissioners of Police, has put it in the power of a corrupt political gambler, and a desperate trickster, to cheat the other Commissioners, thereby destroying the hope we had of having a fair and not a partisan police.

Resolved, That to betray and desert a party from personal pique, is as base as to betray for thirty pieces of silver; and as the Country had a traitor in the days of the Revolution, so the Republican Party has its Benedict Arnold in the person of Simeon Draper.

Mr. SEYMOUR said the political gambler he alluded to was JACOB CRICKWELL, who was "pirated" into the office of the Commission by a corrupt bargain with Senator PRATT. No other business of general interest was transacted.

The Future of California Trade and Travel.

An intelligent and practical survey of tangible facts, and careful estimate of future probabilities, would lessen the zeal and check the enterprise of those who have been for a year or two past engaged in a desperate struggle for possession of the Nicaragua Transit Route, or the establishment of additional overland communications between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. A few days since we expressed our views of the impracticability of the Tehuantepec route. There is no doubt that a road could be constructed in that region, so far as physical obstacles are concerned,—for the engineering difficulties are not formidable. The insurmountable objection to the enterprise is, that it will cost an amount of money which cannot be raised without the exhibition of much larger promise of returns than any just estimate of probabilities will warrant.

The same is true of the Nicaragua Transit route, and the proposed Honduras railroad. All of these must rely chiefly upon the California trade and travel for support. Honduras, in time, would probably add something to the income of a railroad company by the development of her internal resources, but the amount would be inconsiderable compared with the extraordinary cost of constructing and working a road in that climate. Nicaragua can furnish very little local business for her transit, and Tehuantepec none at all. Each of these routes, then, must look to the California trade and travel almost exclusively for support. Neither of them can be availed of to any considerable extent for commercial purposes, because their length, or the necessity of repeated handling of merchandise transported by them will render the cost of freighting too great for profit.

These considerations reduce the reliable support of the projected roads to the single resource of passenger travel. We throw out of view compensation to be derived from carrying the mails,—for that is a secondary item of comparatively small importance in estimating the profits of the roads. The most superficial observer must have noticed that the emigration of gold hunters to California has nearly or quite ceased. Mining has been reduced to a science, and is chiefly carried on now-a-days as a regular, steady, permanent business, by men of capital, or combinations of laboring men, who thus obtain many of the advantages of capital. Property of all kinds has reached a reasonable level, and all industrial or producing interests in the State, bear about the same relations there that they do here. The result is that the population is becoming steady and settled, instead of being constantly migratory, as a few years ago, when they poured their easily acquired gold dust into the pockets of steamer companies with unstinting hand.

To-day, a large proportion of the emigration to California is from the west, and composed of agriculturists or persons who go out content to make moderate gains and with no anticipation of rapid fortune and quick return to the Eastern slope. At no distant day the wagon roads over the plains will be completed, and then the tide of emigration from the west will again pour across the plains, and through the mountain passes, towards the Pacific. This result is inevitable. When the road is thus made easy and safe, the man in Missouri or Arkansas or Iowa, for instance, who proposes a journey to California, will see the economy of taking his team and going overland, instead of selling his little property to pay for tickets from New-York by sea. The cost of getting to New-York will nearly fit a man out for the trip overland; and when he arrives at his destination he will then have his mules or oxen, and whatever stock he chooses to carry with him, all ready to go to work. The advantages will be so largely in favor of the overland route, that few persons west of the Lakes will think of any other.

The causes we have thus enumerated will reduce the aggregate travel between the two oceans, by all the Isthmus routes, to such an extent that five hundred passengers each way per month will prove a high figure. Give all of this to one route, and calculate the price of the transit at $25 per man—the rate charged by the Panama Railroad Company,—and the following is the result:

1000 passengers per month, at $25	$300,000
Gross receipts for one year	300,000
Deducting expenses, 50 per cent	150,000
Balance for dividends	$150,000

This would give an interest of six per cent. only on the sum of two and a half millions of dollars,—a very moderate capital, and one which will not construct a quarter of either the Honduras or Tehuantepec roads. These are the details which prudent capitalists will consider when called upon to embark in interoceanic enterprises, and every man can judge for himself the value of the argument against multiplying them. We do not hesitate to say that these considerations will effectually prevent the consummation of the various projects we have been discussing.

There are only two interoceanic routes, in our judgment, which can ever be made permanently profitable. These are the Panama route and the route across Mexico from Vera Cruz to Acapulco. The latter, because of the large interior business and travel it would accommodate, could be made profitable as a local road, and any California business attracted to it would be incidental merely. The Panama route, because it is very short, and merchandise transported over it requires no handling between ports. Take from it, a year hence, all the California travel, if that were possible, and the prospect is that the deficiency would be more than made up by the rapidly increasing trade of the South Pacific and Central America, to say nothing of the concentration in that direction of the travel and trade between Great Britain and her Australian colonies, which will be effected within a few months. If a shorter sea route to California must be had, Central Mexico alone affords the transit route by use of which it can be sustained; and for commercial purposes Panama can never have a rival. Such are our convictions and such the basis of them, which we present to parties interested for whatever they may find them worth. If we are not greatly mistaken, they furnish abundant reasons why no considerable sum should be wasted by the United States in purchasing a Tehuantepec grant from Mexico.

Transported Irish Patriotism.

The great Irish patriot, JOHN MITCHELL, of Knoxville, Tennessee, has been favoring the world with his views upon Southern prospects, through the medium of a couple of letters, one of which, the shortest, we published on Tuesday, to his "dear MARTIN," late another Irish patriot, temporarily sojourning in Australia, now a barrister, waiting for briefs in Her Majesty's Four Courts, in Dublin. As this is the second or third time that Mr. MITCHELL has inflicted his views de omnibus rebus et quibusdam aliis upon the said MARTIN, we presume the latter is becoming to him what "My dear RAY" was to the late lamented DANIEL O'CONNELL—a sort of spout or gutter through which to pour the floods of his wisdom into the gaping lips of the Irish people. The fortunate RAY, however, got a good living by the receipts and publication of his patron's epistles, and has long since been safely docked in snug harbor of "base, brutal and bloody English Whiggism." The unlucky MARTIN, we fear, will hardly fare so well. The days are gone by in Ireland in which the confidences of an avowed traitor were the best passport to ministerial favor.

In the documents before us, Mr. MITCHELL draws a glowing picture in his own rampant style of the glories or delights of the great region in which he has fixed his home. As if to mock the unhappy MARTIN and impose bitterness into his briefless musings, as he passes the old hall in Dublin, he sings to him of the South of which he is now a denizen—of its "beauty," its "power," its "grandeur," its "matchless climate," its "varied and exhaustless products." "Nowhere," says he, "can you find a higher type of manhood; nowhere does womanhood bloom out into more sovereign beauty. Here Republicanism is in its finest, proudest form." The South is great and strong, is the queen of the future, wants more negroes, must have them and will have them, whatever Exeter Hall may say to the contrary, and whatever the Free States of this Union may do or devise.

As there is a general disposition, even in Ireland, to forgive the antics which this unfortunate gentleman has been playing ever since his arrival in this country, in consideration of the fact, generally believed, that the divers vicissitudes of his political career have had an unhappy effect upon his mind, we hardly like to criticize the piece of blatant bombast in which this illustrious exile crawls and grovels at the feet of the slaveholders. No craven "chibouk ji"—no clumsy "cavégi," guilty of having spilt coffee on the Sultan's knee—no eunuch, found napping at his post by the Kislar Aga, ever howled for life in baser accents, ever poured forth flattery in more fulsome strains at the Padishah's feet, than this bold demagogue at the feet of "the chivalry." If he had openly declared himself a Southern tool and nothing more; if he had said to the fire-eaters, as anything with more manliness would have said—I abjure all my past teachings; I abjure all I ever said or wrote in defence of Freedom; I abjure my belief in the great destiny and great dignity of manhood; I abjure my devotion to weakness and degradation; I disclaim all partiality for Hindoo cavaliers and patriotic Arabs, and all other colored tribes for whose independence I formerly uttered so many aspirations; I detest and despise every race which is trampled on by another and deprived of the fruits of its toil by tyrants, and principally my own countrymen of the province of Connaught. I adore hominy and cotton, and corn. I worship bales and niggers. I am no longer an outlawed Irishman, a martyr for liberty. I am, or desire to be, a cotton producer;—and my highest ambition is to make sixteen bales to the hand. Should I ever so work my fat niggers as to extract twenty bales to the hand, I shall exclaim, in the same words as my great countryman JOHN PHILPOTT CURRAN in his last forensic effort,—he who wasted his life and his eloquence in defending the desolate and oppressed, in vindicating the cause of slaves in the teeth of iron-souled masters—"Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation,"—if he had said all this, possibly we might not have withheld our pity, but we should certainly have refrained from comment. But this man still professes to be, and in the eyes of many still is, a leader amongst his countrymen in America, in the United States. Their position is already somewhat uncomfortable. They are forever defending themselves against taunts, and jeers, and slights. They have been in one way or other, most unjustly we believe, established in something very like a position of social inferiority. Now we are anxious to protect the masses of industrious Irish emigrants, who yearly pour Westward in a golden tide, and prove in their selection of homes for them and their posterity in the Free States, and only in the Free States, that their hearts are still true to the "good old cause," as SYDNEY called it, from the imputations to which MITCHELL's course lays them open in the eyes of those who are not forced into as close an inspection of his vagaries as we are. He has so patently sold himself as a back politician to the Pro-Slavery Party in the South, and is so confessedly bidding for a seat in Congress, as soon as he gets naturalized, that as far as the Northern public is concerned, we may safely let him rave. We are anxious, however, that "foreign nations and the next age" should know that the Irish who come to this country, so far from sympathizing in MITCHELL's admiration of our great institution, prove the contrary, by settling on the very farms in the possibly free States, transported over to require no handling between ports. The only place for a race so long enslaved and oppressed, is a land where oppression meets the eye no more, where no mortal crouches before another, where services such as Mayor SIMS inflicted in Dublin Castle on MITCHELL's countrymen, are unknown, where all distinctions—all those fell distinctions of race and creed, from which no people in the world has suffered so much as the Irish—are no longer felt. We cordially bid them welcome, all the more cordially because we feel the future is ours, a future rich in arms, and arts, and literature. We can well afford to pity the whinings of MITCHELL and his friends for niggers. We have but to sit at our desks, and behind our looms, to walk at the handles of our plows, uttering no cry and giving no sign, and laborers come in crowds, in millions, to join us in our work, read our poets, sit by our firesides, and sympathize with our "maudlin philanthropy."

A "Good Authority" Abroad.

We find the following passage in a leading article of the London Chronicle, received by the Canada:

"Last, but not least in importance, are the reports from America. The New-York Herald, always a good authority on commercial and agricultural subjects, whatever we must think of its political manifestations, promises to its readers the blessing of cheap bread during the coming twelvemonth."

If the London Chronicle were a young and lively journal—an offshoot of Punch, for instance—we might suppose this indorsement of the New-York Herald as a "good authority on commercial and agricultural subjects" to have been intended as a piece of delicate satire, in which case everybody would admit that nothing could be more agreeably sarcastic. But the Morning Chronicle is a very solemn and steady old stager, and its columns are rather the refuge of superannuated facts and arguments out of place than the home of audacious and enterprising fancies. So that we are compelled to suppose that the Chronicle really imagines itself to be stating the unridiculous truth in regard to the Parker Vein organ. And we therefore think it worth while to make the word of the said Chronicle our text for a brief sermon, which we beg all parties interested, or intending to be interested in American affairs, commercial, agricultural, or political, to lay to heart, read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest, lest, in some unlucky hour they buy or sell upon the faith of the Herald, and so a worse thing happen to them.

Imprimis, then, let the Chronicle be informed that, in respect of matters commercial, the New-York Herald is in so far forth a good authority, that its information is usually original with the office of publication. The financial world of New-York is exclusively indebted for instance, to the New-York Herald, for all the intelligence which it ever enjoyed of the rise and progress of two great enterprises, now familiarly known as the "Parker Vein" and the "Potosi Lead" enterprises, which were conceived as boldly as the celebrated project for utilizing the South American Condor, and converting his great physical powers to the uses of commerce, but of which the termination was, on the whole, less satisfactory to the stockholders than to the New-York Herald itself. Equally exclusive was the information which, but the other day, enabled the New-York Herald to make such statements in regard to the Michigan Southern Railroad, as have resulted in a suit for libel, commenced by the managers of that Company against the journal in question. Secondly—and in regard to the interests of agriculture it may be instructive for the London Chronicle, and for other parties equally in arrear of the actual state of parties and newspapers, to peruse the series of lugubrious articles in which the New-York Herald has been chanting the coming deluge throughout all the Spring and early Summer of this current year. The same journal which now "promises its readers the blessing of cheap bread," has been doing its utmost to convince the world that the Great West had fallen through, that the crops were dying in the ground, and the farmers famishing in their homes. And the actual harvest now staring it quite out of countenance, it takes up the old song on a new tune, and prophecies the same disasters from repletion which it denounced before as impending over us through deficiency! Like the Irish lady in the ballad, the "good authority" of the Morning Chronicle "will be ruined, and nobody shall save it."

PROSPECTS OF A QUIET TIME.—After the two months of excitements we have just passed through, there is at last a prospect of a very decided calm. Mayor WOOD has left the City for a fortnight; Mrs. CUNNINGHAM has been taken to the Tombs; the two Street Commissioners are in a state of dead lock, without the chance of another certiorari, quo warranto, or habeas corpus; the Police Commissioners have adjourned until next month, and the Dead Rabbits are as quiet as mice. There has never before been so healthy a season, and all fears of yellow fever or cholera have vanished. Everybody is on the point of going into the country, and no one, except a turbulent Councilman, manifests the slightest disposition for a row of any kind. There is a pretty general desire for a few weeks of repose and quiet during the hot weather of August, and to gather new strength and vigor for a brisk campaign in the Fall. With September will come bracing weather, cooler nights, docks of strangers, and the return of our citizens who have been seeking health and refreshment in the rural districts.

POSTPONEMENT OF THE SALE OF THE FIXTURES ON THE CITY HALL.—The Sheriff's or Mr. LOWBER's bowels of compassion so yearned yesterday over the furniture and "pictures" of the City Hall, that consent was given to spare them yet a little while longer. Before the hour advertised for the sale, Sheriff WILBEY and the Corporation Counsel appeared in Mr. FLAGG's office and asked the Comptroller if he was prepared to shell out on the Lowber judgment. The amiable but relentless City guardian glanced at the gentlemen, and then cast his eye of his quizzical, significant looks at the ceiling, remarked drily that he knew of no funds he could lawfully take for that purpose. Both the Sheriff and Mr. BURNHAM wanted the sale adjourned for a week, but Mr. FLAGG said he didn't care a pin about it—they might go on and so I at most if they thought fit. He had no idea that he would be any more able to raise the cash on the morrow than now. Finally the Sheriff determined to postpone the sale one week longer, at the same hour as already advertised.

The Panama Railway and the Royal West India Mail—Shortest Route from England to Australia.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

LONDON, Tuesday, July 28, 1857.

Some time ago the particulars were given here of the arrangement in virtue of which the Royal West India Mail, whose boats already ply between England and Aspinwall, agreed to amalgamate with or otherwise absorb, the newly chartered Royal Australian Mail, whose vessels were to have performed the Anglo-Australian postal service via Suez, but lamentably failed to do so. It was stated that the effect of this arrangement would be highly advantageous to the Panama Railway, inasmuch as it would enable the Royal Mail Company, no longer opposed by any other powerful corporation, to mature their long contemplated project for continuing this line from Aspinwall to Sydney, of course across the Panama Isthmus, while, at the same time, there would also be a monthly departure hence for Australia by way of Suez. It is well known that a confidential agent of the Royal Mail, having been last year in personal communication with the Panama Directors at New-York, proceeded by way of the Isthmus to New-Zealand, and thence to Sydney, with great views and with what success you will gather from the annexed letter, which has been published here to-day, [illegible]

[illegible] City lots ought to be more important than any other; and yet there are few who have good it as hard a thought. With vast labor [illegible] money, and leave it to be invested for us by some person who is generally much more solicitous about the terms of a barter than the real merit of the investment. Every man in business ought to know as much about real estate as he does about imports, railroads, or bank-stock; while in point of fact the ignorance is universal, and its consequences deplorable. It is the last and surest use of a fortune made in business, to know how to invest this fortune in permanent property, is to have the grand secret of "keeping money after you have made it."

CAUSES OF THE INCREASE IN VALUE OF CITY LOTS.

The ground over which trade or manufacture is carried on in a great city, acquires a value which increases in proportion with the business carried on above it. The ground of the whole city and vicinity, taking upon its surface so large a portion of the commerce of the world, has a value proportionate to that commerce. Spread the same business without increasing it, over twice the surface, and city lots would fall one-half in value. Increase of population does not increase the value of real estate, unless business transacted in the same ratio. London, with twice the population, is not so valuable, area for area, as New-York. Roads and [illegible] are less profitable.

WHICH ARE THE MOST VALUABLE LOTS IN THE CITY?

The most valuable lots will be those over which the largest and most frequent transactions are made daily and constantly. Two millionaires riding down to business may make a bargain involving a million; this does not communicate value to the car in which they were seated—they might have done the same in a dog cart or seated on two donkeys; it is the concourse of business, the tide and vortex of exchange, that give the value. That concourse, tide and vortex is just now in the middle and upper part of Wall-street, which is consequently the most valuable part of the City. All the merchants, manufacturers and bankers of the world assist in giving value to Wall street and its vicinity, because here the greatest values are daily exchanged. That part of Wall-street which lies between Broadway and Pearl street is certainly the most profitable piece of ground at present on the continent, perhaps on the globe, not excepting any gold placer of equal extent.

VALUE OF THE GREAT THOROUGHFARES.

The stores, office, dwelling houses, workshops and manufactories, lying out in all directions and distances about the grand focus of exchange, connect with it by certain avenues, such as Broadway, Nassau-street, and the grand thoroughfare of Broadway. Lawyers, agents, retail dealers, and all kinds of intermediary people, place themselves along the path of the merchant, between his home and his place of business; while the banker or broker wishes to be near the store, and the store comes as near as it can to the ship, the dwelling house, on the contrary, contemptuously turns its back upon the store, and gets as far away as railroads and omnibuses will permit. The money lands in Wall-street, and in the stores that encircle it, is spent on the great thoroughfares where the retail dealers and intermediary people have located themselves for the convenience of the spender. The men of business make the thoroughfare by making it a pathway to their dwellings. The household go to places accessible to husbands and fathers.

Thoroughfares of a less valuable order are made by workmen passing between their homes and places of business. Such, for instance, are the Bowery and several of the great avenues.

DIFFERENT STREETS HAVE DIFFERENT VALUES,

and that too for a good and sufficient reason. The course of business going to and from his store and his dwelling-house, finds the west side of Broadway cooler in Summer and warmer in Winter. His wife and daughters make the same discovery. The retail stores get as near as they can to the customer. Consequently lots on the west side of a thoroughfare are more valuable than those on the east side. There is said to be a difference of one third in favor of the west side. So much for atmospherical causes.

HAND COURTED BY DWELLING-HOUSES.

The family of the merchant ignore the business that maintains them. They wish to "stink the shop." They get as far away from it as railroads, omnibuses and carriages will permit. Great wealth is proud and repulsive; it seeks to isolate itself. An English Duke, with a million income, will not have a house or cottage visible from the windows of his country seat. In cities the value of land makes this lordly exclusiveness impossible. The city is more democratic than the country; men are crowded and rubbed together. As a defence against social democracy, satire neighborhoods are occupied and exclusively held by the rich. The older families regal the newly rich, who struggle to get into these neighborhoods. This struggle communicates a steady and persistent value to such property as that of Fifth-avenue.

THE TWO FOCI OF WEALTH, the social and commercial, Fifth-avenue and Wall-street, represent, also, the two highest values of City lots; over one set of lots the values are made, over the other they are sustained. They are respectively the dark and dirty roots, and the bright golden fruit, of commercial industry and talents. But as the branches and foliage of the tree are larger and more spreading than the roots, so the spending is done over a larger space than the making.

THE FUTURE OF FIFTH-AVENUE.

If there were but Wall-streets there would be also two Fifth-avenues. But there is only one Wall-street, and consequently there can be but one Fifth-avenue.

Fifth-avenue is not a thoroughfare; it bears no resemblance to Broadway; it does not connect one part of the City with another; it is cut off at Washington-square from the City, and leads out through the centre of the Island too far from the East and North Rivers to be a commercial street or a focus of exchange. The grand thoroughfares intersect it, or run parallel on either side of it. It is by nature and position exclusive and has the start, socially, of all other streets. It will, therefore, continue for an unknown period of time to be the centre of fashion, the palace avenue of New-York; and its building lots will have values in proportion.

MOVEMENT OF FASHIONABLE CENTERS.

Sixty years since the vicinity of the Bowling-Green and Battery was the social and fashionable square of the City. Park-Place and St. John's Park were the successors of the Bowling-Green. Bleecker and Bond streets succeeded Park-Place. The successor was to Washington-square. Fifth-avenue grew naturally out of Washington-square, and by its long we [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Fifth-avenue. The opening of Eighth-avenue, alone only to Broadway as a thoroughfare, and connected with it by Bleecker-street, destroyed the social prestige of the latter street, and cast the fashionable world into the neighborhood of Washington-square. Other parts of the City claim equal respectability, and doubtless more desirable for persons of moderate means; we are not discussing the morals but the prices of City lots. Wall-street and Fifth-avenue take the lead.

THE FUTURE OF WALL-STREET.

The banking and exchange business places itself between the store and the dwelling, as near as possible to the store. If Wall-street moves up, as it is already threatening to do, and in part is doing, it will still keep as near as possible to the grand thoroughfare. A part of it will get in advance of the new wholesale interests of Warren, Murray, Chambers, and Park-place; to do that it must go upon Broadway. Park-row, lately built up with stores, appears to be one of the best locations of the banking and exchange interest; but the best of all is, or soon must be, following the principles we have adopted, Broadway above Chambers; and succeeding this, Canal-street, the next grand centre, and undoubted successor of Wall-street. During the next 20 years we shall see the entire Island between and around the Park occupied by wholesale stores. Canal street is indicated by nature as the intermediate point between the wholesale and retail quarters, and will consequently become the grand street of exchange. It communicates with all parts of the City by wide avenues.

MOVEMENT OF THE RETAIL BUSINESS.

Yielding to this movement, the great retail business of the City will retire up Broadway to the vicinity of Bleecker and Washington-square. It will of necessity locate itself at the outlets of Fifth-avenue, and encroach so impudently upon the lower vicinity of that street, Fashion will tuck up her decorated skirts and move haughtily up beyond Murray Hill, still following the natural line of Fifth-avenue.

HOTELS.

Hotels place themselves midway between the dwelling-house and the store, on the grand thoroughfares. The nearer they are to the centres of fashion, the more exclusive they become. Witness the Brevoort and the New-York Hotels—notoriously clique houses. There are no first-class hotels east of Broadway.

A class of hotels superior in social character, more quiet and more select than those of Broadway, may be expected to spring up, before long, on or near the south end of Fifth-avenue. The upward movement is inevitable, and we think it may be looked for in that direction. These new family hotels will place themselves midway between business and residence, nearer to residence.

BOARDING-HOUSES, DOCTORS AND DENTISTS.

A fashionable or respectable street deserted by respectability and fashion is immediately occupied by doctors, dentists, artists, boarding-houses, tailors, and—the demi monde. These keep possession until they are expelled, as they were from Park-place, Chamber and Murray streets, by the stores. During this interregnum the value of the lots increases, while that of the houses diminishes in an equal ratio. The ground-rents are high, but the brick and mortar are doomed, and consequently neglected. In a very few seasons we shall see a row of magnificent retail stores extending along Bleecker-street, now held by boarding-houses, from Broadway to Carmine. These will connect with Fifth-avenue and University-place, through Wooster-street, a portion of which will thus be converted into a fashionable thoroughfare.

PRICES OF LOTS ON FIFTH-AVENUE.

It is seldom we hear of lots for sale on Fifth-avenue below Thirtieth street. The owners of this property can sell it at any time for enormous prices, but they entertain a just conviction of the steady and increasing value of their property, which, for persons of large means and expensive habits, is by far the most desirable on the Island. The row along the north side of Washington-square begins already to look antiquated; they threaten to become boarding houses, and will be so at no very distant period. Physicians, hotel-keepers and fashionable tailors inquire frequently for lower floors and basements to let in the south end o Fifth-avenue. Fashion is angrily moving up, making a stout resistance. She has entrenched herself behind a strong barricade of palaces below Fourteenth street. Inch by inch she will dispute the ground of her grand promenade. But the fates have willed it. She will be compelled to recede, and finally make a long and desperate stand on Murray Hill. On this elevated and truly magnificent locality the water of the Croton will not ascend above the second story. Notwithstanding this domestic disadvantage, lots at the intersection of Broadway with Fortieth and Thirty-ninth streets bear extraordinary prices. For three of these lots, owned by a butcher, $35,000 is demanded. The two highest points, and which overlook the entire Island, are the intersections of Ninety-second and Ninety-third streets, and of Thirty-ninth and Fortieth streets. Both are, also, locations of reservoirs, and for both enormous prices are demanded, because of their elevation.

Lots in these remote neighborhoods, the new centres of the already projected palaces of wealth, as far out as Ninetieth to Ninety-fifth streets, have risen, in the few past years, from two hundred to three thousand dollars a piece, and hardly obtainable even at those prices. They are tossed rapidly from hand to hand, in the market, making each time a profit for the seller, and insuring a quick return to the purchaser. Lots on Fifth-avenue and Fortieth-street already command $10,000. In five years they will have doubled in value.

From Murray Hill to Forty-ninth-street the value of lots diminishes regularly, by sensible gradations, to about $5,000. At Fiftieth street, opposite the College grounds, they rise again, because of the vicinity of an open park. Along the whole of this interspace the lots are unoccupied and the value prospective.

Another rise begins opposite Central Park, Fifty-ninth-street, where lots are again worth $5,000. From that point the values decline a little until you reach Seventy-ninth-street, when, in consequence of a slight elevation in the ground and a fine prospect, $5,000 is again demanded and obtained.

The decided preference given to high ground has imparted again an extraordinary value to the elevated plateau at the intersection of Ninety-first, Ninety-second and Ninety-third-streets with Third-avenue. On this highest ground of the Island, overlooking the whole of Central Park, the beautiful town of Harlem, the East and North Rivers, and the hills beyond, there will be a group of palaces, in all probability the most splendid in the world, except those of royalty. This is the true "West End" of New-York; and here the land bears a prospective value equal to the grandeur of its future destiny. Before the projection of the Park, lots in that vicinity were taken only for debt by grumbling creditors, who were happy if any portion would support a hod-carrier or a market-garden.

GENERAL RISE OF VALUE.

The property of the Messrs. APPLETON, for which they gave only $110,000, a few years ago, is now valued at $210,000. Fifth-avenue and Madison-square lots, twelve years ago worth only $3,000, are now held at $20,000; and more, and rarely offered. We hear men lamenting opportunities with: "Five years ago," they will tell you, "a lot was offered to me on the west side of the City for a few hundred dollars, now worth as many [illegible]

[illegible] opportunity is lost. It is folly to indulge in such idle and foolish to be compelled to listen to it. The same "chances" which are so cheaper at all to intelligent purchasers, are to be found further out in the unoccupied regions of the City. The same causes that have increased the value of the land one-fold below Fourteenth-street are operating higher up. Prices supposed by ignorant persons to be merely speculative are the natural values; and the values of unoccupied land are almost invariably underrated. The increase keeps pace with the commerce of the City, and that is rapidly becoming the commerce of the world.

KANSAS.

Correspondence of the Boston Journal.

QUINDARO, KANSAS, Tuesday, Aug. 4, 1857.

A good deal of local excitement and inflammatory feeling toward Quindaro has recently been excited, and now exists in the adjacent portions of Missouri. Reports are circulated and have obtained belief that the slaves across the river are enticed to come here by the citizens of this town, and when pursued and identified, are still kept from their owners in defiance of law. These rumors naturally produce great excitement in Missouri; some of the newspapers are beginning to make inflammatory appeals, and in two instances projects have been set on foot for an organized band to come over here with hostile purposes. I am assured by a perfectly reliable gentleman, who resides in Missouri, that the Blue Lodge is again in operation in Platte County, and that a few violent and active endeavoring to inflame the people against this town.

I hope that the affair will not produce serious trouble. Quindaro is distinctively and radically a Free-State town, and its citizens almost without exception are opposed to the extension of Slavery a single foot beyond its present limits. The head and front of our offending hath this extent—no more.

The reports that slaves are enticed to come here, or detained when found and identified, are utterly false. They are set on foot by parties interested in two rival towns on the river, and whose jealousy is so excited by the rapid growth of Quindaro, that they are seeking to injure it in this almost devious and unmanly way.

The two prisoners at Leavenworth are held over to wait trial for murder. They are in the Delaware jail.

Correspondence Chicago Tribune.

The most extensive and formidable military organization, that ever existed in a Territory of the United States, has been formed, within the last three weeks, in Kansas. Its purpose is to protect the ballot box at the October election, and forever afterwards, until our admission into the Union as a Free State. If, by fraud and bribery, Kansas is admitted as a Slave State, this organization will not be dissolved. The Free-State men have an overwhelming majority in Kansas, and if their rights are not respected, a civil war will be instantly inaugurated. I speak from knowledge, not from belief. Over five thousand men have already been enrolled, and five thousand more, as the lowest calculation, will be under military orders before October next. If Missouri attempts to interfere with Kansas affairs, the slaves in the Platte Region will be liberated at the point of the bayonet. BUCHANAN, DOUGLAS, ATCHISON & Co will find that they will rouse up a tiger, instead of a worm, if they attempt to force their favorite organized crime on the people here. The Free State men are too strong now to care for the troops or Government either.

I will give a brief history of the organization:

Governor WALKER promised, in his speech at Topeka, that the people—"the whole people—should have the right of voting at the October election, not under the Territorial assessment, but by virtue of a law of Congress.

In consequence of this assertion the Free State Party resolved, at their Convention, of the 15th of July, to vote at the October election, provided that the Governor fulfilled his promise.

Knowing that the present Congress is Democratic, the people expected a law which would enable the Missourians to vote as they have done at other Territorial elections. They thought it expedient, therefore, to provide some security against another invasion.

Judge CONWAY offered this resolution:

Resolved, That General JAMES H. LANE be appointed by this Convention, and authorised to organize the people in the several districts to protect the ballot boxes at the approaching elections in Kansas.

The resolution was passed unanimously.

Gen. LANE immediately began his operations. He issued an order requesting the people to form Companies in their various neighborhoods, towns and settlements, and every man to enroll himself in some one of the same; that when each Company should contain not less than 30 nor more than 80 men, it elect a Captain, one first and one second Lieutenant, two sergeants and two corporals; and that it make a perfect and complete roll of its officers and men, in accordance with the printed forms which would be transmitted from head-quarters. He requested also that the captain of each company should direct a registry to be made of all persons in his neighborhood, town, or settlement, if any such there be, who should refuse to enroll himself in said company, and transmit the same, with his Company's roll, to head-quarters.

When the aforesaid rolls should be received, certificates for the officers would be promptly forwarded, after which requisitions for arms, signed by the company's officers, might be sent to the office of the Quartermaster-General.

The General Staff, as organized, consisted of M. F. CONWAY, Adjutant-General; E. B. WHITMAN, Quarter-Master General, and WILLIAM A. PHILLIPS, Commissary-General, each with an office in this city.

This order was widely circulated, and companies were enrolled in every district. Many of them have not yet officially reported their strength, but reliable information already puts the number of volunteers at five thousand men. "They are all dreadfully in earnest."

The Blackwood Murder Case in New-Orleans.

From the New-Orleans True Delta, 6th.

The examination of GEORGE G. BLACKWOOD before Assistant Recorder HOLLAND on a charge of murder, in stabbing C. WILTIE A. WRIGHT through the heart last Saturday evening, at the corner of Dauphin and Canal-streets, was fixed for this morning at 11 o'clock. The excitement which existed on the facts of the case being made known, has increased exceedingly, and the feeling of indignation against the perpetrator of a crime that, so far as known, was one of the most unjustifiable, deliberately cold-blooded and brutal occurrences that could well be imagined, has become violently intense. Under such circumstances, the investigation expected to have commenced today, was waited for eagerly, so that a full and impartial statement of all the circumstances might be obtained. This expectation, however, as will be perceived, will not be realized. The feelings that may be engendered by this course, we rather think, will not be favorable to the accused.

Long before the hour named, the neighborhood of the Recorder's Court, and the Court itself, began to wear an aspect that informed a person at once that something of unusual importance and absorbing interest was about to be transacted. The rumors that we had heard in regard to anticipated violence to the prisoner, we perceived had reached the authorities, as the chief of police, the special officers, and a large body of the rank and file, were posted around the building.

The action of Assistant Recorder HOLLAND, we presume, was influenced by the well-grounded apprehension that measures would have been taken to mark the detestation which has new been excited in the city against the perpetrators of wanton deeds of blood, and that some violence would have been committed on BLACKWOOD, as he is considered to be in the blackest category of offenders.

When we left the precincts of the Court the crowd were eagerly learning the result, but we had no time to ascertain what the feeling about the matter was.

Heavy Arrival of Wheat from Kentucky.

From the Cincinnati Gazette of Aug. 11.

From Mr. R. STRADER, Conductor on the Covington and Lexington Railroad, we learn that twenty-five cars, containing each three hundred bushels of wheat, arrived at Covington depôt, last evening, from the interior of Kentucky. Thirteen full cars were on the side tracks along the line of the Railroad waiting for a locomotive to bring them down. From two farmers who came down with the wheat above mentioned, we learn that the crops through middle Kentucky are luxuriant—the yield exceeding that of any previous year.

On Friday the shipment of wheat commenced, and fifteen car loads were brought down to this market. On Saturday seventeen car loads more arrived, together with about two thousand bushels of oats and barley.

On yesterday wheat was deliverable at any station on the line of the Railroad at $1 10@$1 15. The Railway company this year charging 14c. per bushels for its transportation from Lexington to Covington. Last year 15c. was demanded.

On Friday and Saturday last seventy car loads of cattle arrived in this City from the interior of Kentucky, viâ the Covington and Lexington Railroad.

MILLS STOPPED.—The number of cotton looms that have been stopped in New-England, in consequence of the high price of cotton and the low price of goods, is about six thousand, and orders have been given to stop many more, as fast as the yarn runs out. We learn, yesterday, of two large mills that will run only till the cotton now in process of manufacture is exhausted. This is the only remedy. We talk of the short supply of cotton. The evil is not there; it is in the over supply of cotton machinery. The looms now in operation are not only too many for the supply of cotton—they are too many for the demand for cotton goods at anything like the prices which alone, at the present cost of the raw material, can return a new dollar for an old one. In England thirty thousand looms have been stopped, and prices have quickly responded to this judicious curtailment of production.—Providence Journal.

Another Murdering and Mysterious Affair in Cincinnati.

From the Gazette, 10th.

Night before last, at the hour of midnight, Officer HARRIMAN and Sergt. of the Third Ward heard the shrill screaming of a woman, and thought to be a female voice, and loud cries of murder, proceeding from a figure in a skiff in the middle of the river, just above the Licking, and a moment after heard in the rather dim distance what appeared to be the form of a man in the bow of the boat, plunging something into the water.

A splash was heard, and all was still, while the skiff rowed swiftly away, and was soon invisible through the darkness.

The inference, of course, was and is, that a woman had been cruelly murdered by being thrown into the water and drowned.

The officers were exceedingly anxious, it is said, to get a boat or some kind of conveyance to follow the supposed murderers, who, as if fearing pursuit, pulled stoutly at the oars, and were soon out of sight. This is certainly a very mysterious and horrible affair, and needs probing to the bottom.

What gives not only coloring to the story, but probability to the opinion that the woman was murdered, is a similar alleged fact, related by officer HARRIMAN as well as Sergeant and Capt. of the Third Ward, that a night or two ago, a woman was seized by two men, on Water-street, and borne to a skiff (which was pulled into the river, the woman, meanwhile, making resistance, and screaming all she could, with the hands of the ruffians over her mouth,) and then cast into the water, from which, as her clothes sustained her upon the surface, she was soon rescued by persons on the Newport ferry.

THE JOINT FISHERY COMMISSION.—The Toronto Colonist states that the members of the Joint Fishery Commission, under the Reciprocity Treaty with the United States, consisting of Gen. G. CUSHMAN, of Bangor, the United States Commissioner, and R. D. OWEN, Esq., of Washington, his Surveyor, with M. H. PERLEY, Esq., Her Majesty's Commissioner, and Captain E. FAILEY, Esq., his Secretary and Surveyor, have differed respecting the settlement of some differences as to the rivers of New-Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, and have appointed Hon. J. H. GRAY, of St. John, New-Brunswick, as umpire to decide between them.

AN ARRESTED MURDERER IDENTIFIED.—Marshal BURTS, of Covington, arrested, some days ago, a person for some petty offence in that city, and afterward had reason to believe him one JOHN FLY, who murdered, on the 29th of June last, a young man named DAVID M. THOMPSON, in Murfreesborough, Tenn., and for whom the young man's father, JOHN THOMPSON, of Octobeha County, in Miss., had offered a reward of two thousand dollars. FLY had been minutely described, and the Marshal wrote to Tennessee respecting his arrest, and has received, within a day or two, such intelligence as leads him to feel almost certain that his present prisoner is FLY, and no one else. The arrested party admits that he left Tennessee on account of a young man having been killed by lightning and the body half consumed by the house taking fire from the fluid, and of a fear in consequence of the accident, that such strong suspicion of murder would attach to him as to cause him to be lynched. The affair, regarded as a whole, renders it highly probable that FLY has at last been brought to justice, and will be made to pay the penalty of his crime.—Cincinnati Gazette.

PORT WARDEN AFFAIRS.—The following letter furnishes valuable information for Shipowners, Merchants, and others doing business with English Underwriters:

(COPY.)

UNDERWRITERS' ROOMS, Liverpool, July 29, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 1st of June, enclosing copy of Law regulating the Warden's office of the Port of New-York, requesting instructions to be given to the agent of that port to aid to the best of his ability in carrying its provisions into full and complete effect, having been laid before the Committee for managing the affairs of the Liverpool Underwriters' Association, I am directed to state in reply, that fully impressed with the advantage which merchants, shipowners, and underwriters must derive from an efficient and authorised Board of Surveyors, this Association will most heartily support the Port Wardens of New-York, by instructing their agent at that port, ROBERT MACKIE, Esq., to assist in carrying the new act into full effect; and further, by requiring the Port Wardens' certificate before settling claims for damage to vessels or cargoes surveyed in New-York.

I remain, Sir, Your most obedient servant,

THOMAS COURT, Secretary.

Two men, named PATRICK WARD and JAMES GALLAGHAN, got into a fight on Sunday, at Rondout, WARD being stabbed in two or three places. It is feared that his wounds will prove fatal. GALLAGHAN was a boatman, and has since made his escape. The fight was caused by a dog which belonged to WARD, and as GALLAGHAN was passing the latter's grocery, the dog came at him, but was received by a kick which sent him yelling away. WARD came to join in the fight, when he was stabbed as stated above.

SUPERIOR COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justice Hoffman.

APPEALS FROM DISTRICT COURTS.

Charles Hawkins vs. The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York.—HOFFMAN, Justice.—The application is to stay a sale of property seized upon an execution issued on a judgment in the District Court for the Third Judicial District, against the defendants.

Judgment was recovered in such Court before Mr. Justice Meecker, on the 27th of July, 1857, in favor of the plaintiff, for the sum of $13 15. Notice of appeal to this Court was thereupon given, and the provisions of the 35th section of the code, as amended in 1857, appear to have been fully complied with.

The appeal thus being perfected, the cause may be treated as in this Court for the purpose of being here reviewed, if this Court possesses any jurisdiction.

But the requirements of the statutes have not been complied with, so as to make the appeal a stay of proceedings.

The 356th, 358 and 357th sections of the code are in force. In order to stay the issuing of an execution, or proceedings under it if issued, the undertaking therein prescribed must be approved by the court below, and a copy must be certified by the court below.

It appears from the papers before me that the Justice refuses or avoids approving the undertaking. A mandamus has been obtained commanding him to show cause why he should not approve it.

The mode of obtaining a stay of proceedings is regulated by statute, and must be strictly pursued. The subject in connection with appeals of this nature is fully discussed in Smith vs. Allen, (2, E. D. Smith, Rep. 240.)

This Court, even if it has jurisdiction of the appeal, cannot be justified in staying proceedings upon any other grounds than those prescribed by the statute. But if this was not a sufficient answer to the application, I should be compelled to deny it upon the ground that this Court has no jurisdiction of appeals from the District Courts of this City.

I shall not attempt to state the course of reasoning which has led me to this result, because the point has been argued before the General Term at the July session, and will receive there a full investigation, as well as an authoritative decision. If I am right, my reason will be unimportant; and if wrong, the present appeal will be heard.

Motion denied.

KILLED BY A BROOKLYN-AVENUE RAILROAD CAR.—An old man, named [illegible], a native of Ireland, died yesterday at his house, Oliver-street, (No. 91. On the 31st of July he was run over by a Second-avenue car, at the corner of Eighth-street. Mr. HYNEST was in his 66th year. Yesterday, Coroner OGDEN presided in the late residence of deceased, and commenced holding an inquest upon the body. The evidence then adduced shows that deceased was riding in the car, and as it reached the corner of Eighth-street he rang the bell for it to stop, as he wished to get out. The rear part of the car was full of passengers, and he crowded that he could not press through them. He then went to the front platform and stepped off, the driver having only checked the speed of his team, but not brought it to a full stop. Mr. HYNEST, in stepping off, lost his balance, owing to the moving of the car, and was run over by the wheels. He was immediately conveyed to a drug store, and attended by Dr. HENRY SEMPRANE, who ascertained that his hip had been fractured. Several of the passengers followed Mr. HYNEST into the store, and all blamed the driver for not stopping the car when the bell rang. Dr. SEMPRANE in giving his evidence, stated that considering the manner in which the cars are crowded, and the reckless conduct of the drivers, it was surprising that the loss of life and limb was not much greater than it is. Mr. H., after being attended at the drug store, was conveyed to his residence, where he lingered, most of the time in great agony, until Wednesday morning. The Coroner did not close the case, wishing more testimony. He will resume it to-day. The deceased formerly belonged to the British Ordnance Department, and for 15 years past has been connected with the shipping firm of WILLIAMS & GREEN.

BARNUM'S AMERICAN MUSEUM.—THE BOGUS BURDELL BABY is now to be seen at this Museum, having just arrived from Bellevue Hospital and with its real mother, Mrs. Anderson, been placed at this establishment to gratify, for A FEW DAYS ONLY, the public curiosity. This is the genuine BORROWED BABY, which was the valuable instrument, through District-Attorney A. Oakey Hall, Esq., and Dr. Uhl, of exposing the stupendous Bond-st. fraud and which was pronounced by Mrs. Cunningham to have the "exact nose and chin" of the late DR. BURDELL. The EMBROIDERED BABY'S DRESS, provided by Mrs. Cunningham, is also at the Museum, to gather with a correct photographic likeness, by Meade Brothers, of Mrs. Cunningham, alias Mr. Burdell. The whole may be seen on the first floor of the Museum, EVERY DAY AND EVENING, at all the usual hours of exhibition. NO EXTRA CHARGE for admittance to the Museum, notwithstanding this additional attraction.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, Aug. 14, at 3, and EVENING, at 8, optical illusions, mechanical deceptions, innocent diablerie and eight-voiced ventriloquism, of that Prince of Necromancers, Prof. WYMAN. The grand COSMOPANOPTICON STUDIO is still open. The Happy Family, the enormous Living Serpent, the Waxworks, &c. Admittance, 25 cents; children under 10 years, 12 cents.

A CARD.
THE BORROWED BABY.
Numerous solicitations from respectable families to that effect have induced me to procure this child and its mother for exhibition, and the public generally appears to be anxious to reward poor little "Jimmie" as the innocent means of preventing cruel injustice and [illegible] monstrous fraud. [illegible]
Mrs. Anderson, the mother of the "Burdell boy," is of full age, and able to judge of her own proceedings. She is not in custody, and has not been. She is not under control of the authorities. Their permission, one way or the other, in regard to her movements, is simply absurd. Mr. Daly admitted that she was at liberty to go when she thought fit, and an evening herself of the public curiosity to improve her pecuniary position. [illegible]
A morning paper asserts that Mrs. Anderson has not yet fully recovered her health. Her physician and Mrs. A. herself, both declare the contrary. Who is the best judge? The public will smile at the absurdity of the editorial remark that the exhibition of the "vague baby" is an "outrageous proceeding" and especially should it be remembered that the same editor has disposed of thousands of "extra" on the strength of his publication of the statements of the pretended abduction.
JOHN GREENWOOD, Jr., Manager
American Museum, August 13th, 1857.

MISS JULIANA MAY—THE FRIENDS OF MISS JULIANA MAY, prima donna, are respectfully informed that she will make her first appearance in her native country, after an absence of six years in Europe, early in September next.

F. WIDDOWS, LATE MANAGER OF Niblo's, formerly from the Boston and Philadelphia and the Canadas, with the above distinguished artiste, will be happy to make arrangements with artists, who contemplate making a tour of the States. Letters addressed No. 55 Thompson-st., or to NOVELLO'S Music store, will be promptly attended to.

WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

AMERICAN WATCHES.—TO THE TRADE.—These watches are made by the old of new and original machinery and tools, specially designed to supply with a low price a fine, substantial and correct time-keeper. The movements are new, simple and beautiful in plan and construction, remarkably easy of repair, and have been pronounced by the oldest chronometer and watchmakers to be faultless in principle and quality, and by all who have used them to be reliable in performance. Each one is engraved "Appleton, Tracy & Co., Waltham, Mass.," and is accompanied by a certificate of genuineness and perpetual warranty over our written signature.
We ask no man to buy these watches merely because they are of American manufacture. We ask only that this fact shall not be permitted to exclude them from consideration. THURSDAY, Aug. 13—P. M.

The changes in Money affairs were not important to-day. There is a more active business in demand loans among part of the Stock Brokers, though the change in the case of supply is by no means general. The Discount Brokers report substantially the same terms for holders, 8½@9 ₩ cent. for strictly prime lists, and 10@12 ₩ cent. for fair names. The offerings at some of the heavy mercantile Banks this week are quite full, owing to the activity among the Importers and Jobbers for the Fall trade.

The Stock Exchange closed dull again this afternoon, and most of the Railway list was lower by a fraction than at the close on Wednesday. In Michigan Southern the decline was more important, say to 48¾ ₩ cent. as against 46½ yesterday. The Bears, this week, have turned the rather freer supply of cash stock to their advantage, and the leading Bulls appeared less disposed to support the market to-day. The general market was weak at the close of the Second Board, but, with the exception referred to, prices left off about the same as on the previous sales: Erie, 31¾. Sales: Central, 81¾ for the opening; Reading, 70⅝@¾; Toledo, 51½@⅝ ₩ cent., and La Crosse 32¾ ₩ cent. After the Board there were sales of Michigan Southern at 41 ₩ cent.

The California arrival of $1,245,905 in Gold by the Central America is $225,000 less than the corresponding mail last Summer, while the shipment to England direct is $100,000 more. The whole remittance from San Francisco, on 20th July, was $1,802,000, exclusive of Government drafts upon the Sub-Treasury here, which will be making their appearance in a day or two. About $100,000 presented to-day. Against that portion of the remittance sent direct to England by the West Indian steamer from Panama, the Sterling Exchange is mostly to be drawn here by Mr. BELMONT. The business of mining goes on regularly, and the accounts are satisfactory. The San Francisco papers report poorly of the general market for merchandise.

The earnings of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad for the month of July, ult., are.....$90,017
Corresponding month last year.....68,060
Increase.....$22,957

The Capital Stock of the Marine Bank of Chicago has been increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000. The Cashier is Mr. B. F. CARVER, formerly of Mohawk Valley in this State.

Important Foreign Financial News.

DECLINE IN CONSOLS.

From the Times, (City Article,) July 31.

There has been great agitation in the funds to-day, and the market has closed more heavily than at any period since the first news of the Indian insurrection. Consols for money opened at the final prices of last evening—90⅞ to ⅞, but soon manifested weakness, and ultimately, under the influence of a succession of large speculative sales, declined to 90⅝ to ½, from which there was no recovery. For the 6th of August the last quotation was 90⅜. Early in the day private telegraphic dispatches were again received, with further details of the spread of the mutiny, and of the completeness of the original plot, which had involved the seizure of Calcutta, and when these were subsequently published they greatly stimulated the general feeling of anxiety. The announcement that 3,000 rebels were encamped outside Delhi was especially regarded as a disagreeable feature, but it is to be presumed they were able to occupy that situation simply from being protected by the guns on the outworks. The tendency, however, in the Stock Exchange was to take a gloomy view of the entire position; and late in the day it was reported that 10,000 additional troops would forthwith be ordered out. On the other hand, it was generally acquainted with India rents disposed to place increased confidence in the statement from Madras that some days before the 26th of June Delhi had fallen. The firm from whom it proceeds, Messrs. BURNY & Co., are highly respectable, and they seem to make it upon official authority. This point will most probably be cleared up with the delivery of the letters on Saturday. Bank Stock left off at 215@217; Reduced, 96⅝@⅞; New Three ₩ Cents., 90⅝@⅞; India Stock, 214@216; India Bonds, 7s.@10s. discount; and Exchequer Bills, 5s.@10s. discount.

From the Times, (City Article) Aug. 1.

The funds opened with great dulness this morning at a decline of an eighth from the depressed prices of yesterday, and remained without much recovery until after regular hours, when a report that the news alleged to have reached Madras on the 26th of June of the fall of Delhi had been confirmed on the delivery of the Indian letters at Marseilles led to several purchases, and a rise of more than a quarter per cent. Consols, which left off last evening at 90⅝@⅞, were first quoted 90⅝@⅞. From this they soon went to 90⅝@⅞, but the improvement made no further progress up to the official close. Subsequently there were buyers at 90⅞. For the new account on the 9th of September the last regular transactions were at 90⅝@91, and afterwards the quotation was 91⅛. Bank Stock closed at 215@217; Reduced, 96⅝@⅞; New Three per Cents., 90⅝@⅞; India Stock, 214@216; India Bonds, 5s.@10s. discount; and Exchequer Bills, 5s.@10s. discount.

The flow of gold from the Bank is uninterrupted, a further sum of £47,000 having been withdrawn to-day. The pressure for money has consequently increased, and the supply in the open market being altogether inadequate the applications at the Bank have been extraordinarily heavy. Should the demand continue with equal force for a few days longer an advance in the rate must be expected.

Foreign securities have been in little demand throughout the day, and prices are a shade flatter. In Turkish, however, there was a slight recovery. No transactions took place in the 4 ₩ cents. guaranteed. Dutch 2½ ₩ cents. were negotiated at 64; Mexican, for the account, 23¾@¾; Sardinian, 89⅞; Spanish, 47@¾; do. New Reserved, for the account, 34; Turkish 6 ₩ cents., 84⅝@¾; and for the account, 84⅝@¾.

In the foreign exchanges, the rates for Amsterdam and Hamburg were a shade lower; Paris was about the same as last week.

The Corn market was dull this morning, but the prices of Monday were maintained. The export of the Liverpool Cotton Market for the week shows a great increase at full quotations.

The final quotations of the French Three per Cents. on the Paris Bourse this evening were 66f. 40c. for money and 66f. 30c. for the present account, showing a recovery of an eighth.
